

Shootinglee - Survey and Excavation, 2012

Joyce Durham

Centred on NT3160 3140

Funder: Peeblesshire Archaeological Society

In March 2012 the Peeblesshire Archaeological Society began a programme of archaeological work at Shootinglee, near Traquair. The work included a resistivity survey carried out by the Edinburgh Field Archaeology Society (Fig 1); a plane table survey (Fig 2) and a trial trench from which medieval pottery was retrieved. Archival sources name Shootinglee as a forest stead within the Ettrick Forest.

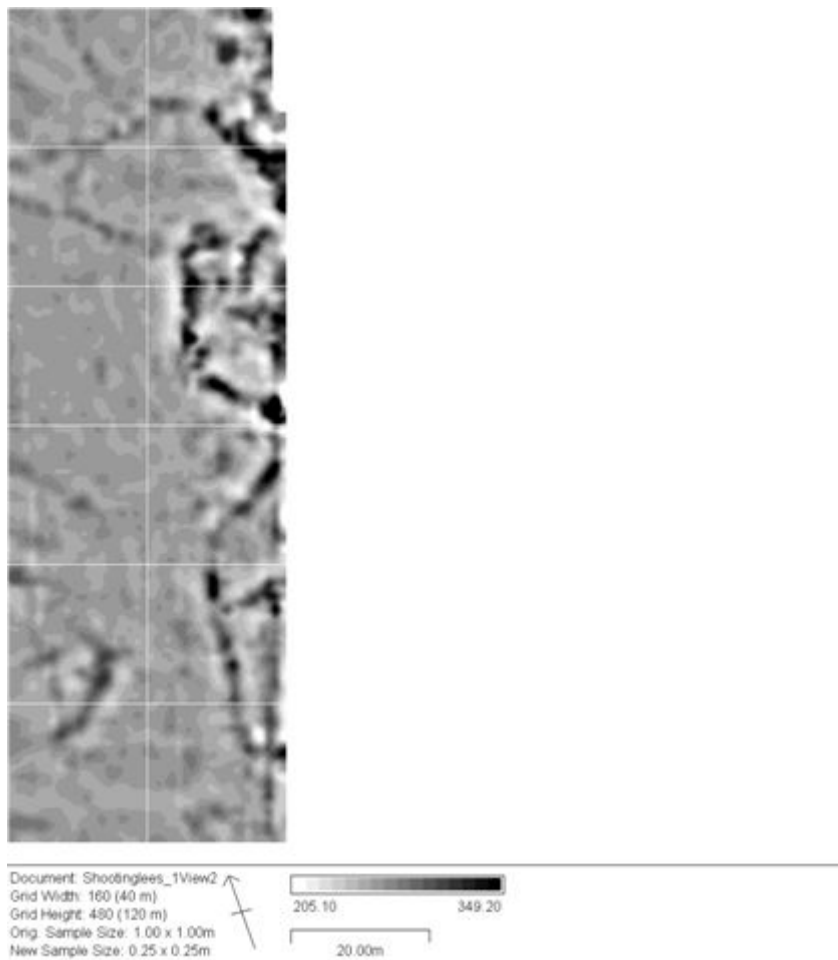

Fig 1 Resistivity Survey

Fig 2 Plane Table survey in progress